Washington (Pa.) Reporter, Monday.

A meeting of some of our citizens was eld Monday morning, in the Council chamber, to devise means by which our people could aid Wheeling in her distress. J. M. Reed, Sr., was made President and 4. M. Todd, E:q., was chosen Secretary.

A long list of committees for the different sections was appointed. Ere this they have waited on our citi-SAMARITAN EMPLOYEE

Ere this they have waited on our citizens.

On Saturday the following telegram was received from the Mayor of that city:

"We need provisions, clothing or money. We wish to avoid making an appeal for help, out our citization is just this, one-half of our city has been flooded and at least suchtiff of our population is loss this, one-half of our population is loss this, one-half of our population is loss they and destitute. Our home relief fund is rapidly exhausting."

This telegram being made public our people have responded. We are unable at this time to state what results have been accomplished by the committees, as our paper went to press before—their reports were received. We know, however, that several hundred dollars were reported at the meeting as being aircasty paid in before the ecommittees were to work; besides a considerable quanty of food and clothing. The social and commercial relations between this efflicted city and our borough are cless and we have no doubt that to proportion to our population and wealth the response from here will be large and generoue.

The Mayor's telegram shows the unfor-

William M. Evarts is so slight and frail in figure as to give an impression of weakness. But this is an error. He is the thinnest of the race. Evarts can out eat, out drink and out talk any three men, and all at once. The verbosity for which Mr. Evarts is noted is but the fluent expression of an active, ready, tireless brain. Joseph H. Choat, the successila advocate, is one of the readiest and the wittiest speakers in the Middle States. His success is due mainly to two reasons. He takes only such cases as he believes in, and pushes them with ability. John E. Parsons, while lacking rhetorical strength, is methodical, acute, and possesses an indomitable energy. Aaron J. Vanderpool is the vulcan of the New York bar. Short, howeny and thickset, with heavy Jaws and deep ast eyes, he is cut out for heavy work, and glories in it. Send Up Your Card, "Etiquette" points need a very liberal translation in this country, when they are derived from manuals and not from comtranslation in this country, when they are derived from manuals and not from common sense. For instance, it would seem extremely foolish in making calls to hold to the English rule, which says "never send in your card when people are at home," This means, liberally interpreted, when people are plainly insight in the partior, or you are told they are there, or know they are "receiving," by getting their cards for this particular day and hour. But when, as it might bappen in half the passes, people are at home, when they are in the house, to all callers, on any day in the week, they are not always to be found down stairs. In that case it is a great convenience to know who the caller is, that a familiar friend may be sent for to come wherever the mistress of the house may happen to be, or a business call may be naderstood by the caller's name. Always send up your name, therefore, which is never carried so smoothly as by pasteboard, unless you know the liceices is within the parior door, in that case you announce yourself by a pearance and not by pasteboard.

Matthew Arnold holds that majorities are not necessarily right. It is a bold doctrine, and, as stated, radical. For instance: A few years ago, one of our best read and most skillful physicians wished to publish his experience in the treatment of certain forms of disease, but his relation with his profession forbade. "You may treat them yourself," said the code, "but you cannot give the public the means of self-treatment." This seemed arbitrary and unjust. He, therefore, resigned his membership in his professional societies, and placed his preparation upon the market. He was impelled by the sense of right which, as Mr. Arnold says, make a minorities strong, and his manly action has met with the inlest success. The value of such an act is now conceded by the universal use of what we believe is called Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," of Rondout, N.Y. He has combined well known elements in new proportions and secured thereby a power over blood disorders.

THE MORAL OF IT. We may moralize as much as we please about pain; but the fact is, hat we don't like it while it lasts, and that we want to get rid of it as soon as we can. Whether caused by rheumatism, gout, disordered liver, weak nerves, irregular kidneys, bad blood, or anything else that is just the reverse of what it should be, the sooner it is out of the system the happer we are.
